A brief allusion to the origin of this important discovery may not prove uninteresting. Among the authoritisted records of the removated Captain Cook's voyage around the world, is found the statement, that while so-journing for a stort time on the Brazilian Coast of South America, he observed the natives using in the prep ration of their food, a peculiar oil, which, upon examination, he sound to posses the appearance, taste and favor of Butter; upon further implify, however, he ascertained that it was simply a substance that the natives distilled in a crude and imperied manner from a rich and luxuriant plant that grew spontal busty and shundantly in that warm tropless country. A few years ago an sminent French chemist, while on a processional visit to the troples, made numerous experiments with this remarkable production of nature, and successfed in extracting a concentrated essence of the plant. The formula for its preparation, and the Sole Right for the sale in this country are the exclusive property of this company, by whom it was purchased from the original discovere.
